Biography

Louise Lewis came to Reed Hilderbrand after leading her own residential design practice in Litchfield County, CT and serving as the Director of Capital Projects for Friends of the High Line in New York City. During her time at Friends of the High Line, Louise was involved in all aspects of the planning, design, construction, and collaboration with the City of New York for multiple phases of the High Line. A graduate of Harvard University's Graduate School of Design, Louise received the Penny White Grant to study the work of Piet Oudolf. Louise has served as project manager at Ken Smith Landscape Architect in New York City, focusing on urban public projects including the East River Waterfront in Lower Manhattan and the Brooklyn Academy of Music Cultural District in Downtown Brooklyn.
